SEABOARD TRAIN WRECKED.

Deputy Sheriff James Going From Live Oak Slightly Injured—No Lives Lost.

The Tampa Times of Saturday gives the following account of the recent wreck of a Seaboard passenger train near State City:

"Passenger train No. 81 of the Seaboard Air Line, due in Tampa at 6:30 a. m. from Jacksonville, was wrecked a few minutes after 5 o'clock while passing the wood rack three miles south of State City today. The train which was made up of a baggage car, express car, second-class smoker, first-class coach and two sleepers, was proceeding at the regular rate of speed and had just issued from the cut near which the sand racks are located when the accident happened.

"The accident was caused by the sand racks mentioned catching on fire and burning out a portion of the track, allowing the rails to spread, as soon as the weight of the engine ran onto them. In some way the engine got across and landed safely on the rails on the south side, but every one of the cars except the rear sleeper was derailed, the only thing which seems to have prevented them from turning over on their sides being that the main portion of the train was still in the cut against the side of which the cars leaned. None of the passengers nor crew of the train were injured seriously, but many of them were bruised and shaken, among the number being Deputy Sheriff T. L. James, who was on his way from Live Oak to Tampa and who was asleep on one of the seats. Mr. James was thrown on his head and right shoulder and slightly bruised. For some reason or other it was impossible to establish communication by wire with Tampa and the engine was therefore dispatched to secure help, returning later with coaches in which the passengers continued their journey to Tampa, where they arrived about 12:30, just six hours behind time.

"The damage to the track and equipment was not of a serious nature, the injury to the coaches being principally the tearing off of the running boards as they dragged along the sides of the cut, and the ties were as usual in accidents of this nature torn up for some little distance."

Disastrous Fire at Carrabelle.

Carrabelle, Jan. 30.—A disastrous fire occurred here late this afternoon, and before it was fully extinguished it had destroyed property valued at $30,000. The blaze started in the City Hotel, and the town being without protection it spread rapidly across the street to the residence of J. N. Maiges and N. O'Neal and the grocery store of W. M. Roberts, all of which were burned. It then spread to the lumber yards of the Franklin Lumber Co., destroying considerable lumber.

Governor Gilchrist has offered a reward of $100 for the arrest and conviction of the unknown party or parties who on or about the 30th of November, 1908, murdered Columbus G. McLeod, on Cayo Pelow Island, Lee county, Fla. Much mystery surrounds this case. The body of McLeod, who was an agent of the Audubon Society, has never been found. His hat with two axe chips in it and with blood and hair on the hat, his boat sunk with sand sacks tied to it, one oar floated ashore, also the sprit to his sail, were found, but nothing has since been seen of McLeod or his remains.
